Economics

Associate Professor Scott McConnell, member of the craft beer industry as a part-owner of Side A Brewing, enables theory and practice to come together!

What do Warren Buffet, Mick Jagger and Bill Belichick all have in common? They were all economics majors!

Economics prepares you to be part of the bigger conversations that take place in the world. Employers today seek people who can critically analyze problems using data and analytical models, but also understand social and cultural issues from a variety of perspectives and communicate what they know to a broader audience. It is for this reason that economics degree-holders are the most likely to become CEOs among all college graduates.

"At any other college a program like economics would be crowded and overwhelming. At EOU the material and professors are exceptional, which provides a platform for success. The class sizes are small and class interactions are consistent."
